DAMDPI'S NEW BOOK - Architectural ELEMENT Series

Think of it! Before 'Five Points of New Architecture' by Le Corbusier, architecture is reflected Regional or National characteristics.

How to design with those characteristics? What story is them talking about? How have they changed now?

Architecture is the mixture of each elements; Some that have been thousands of years and the others have been a few days ago.

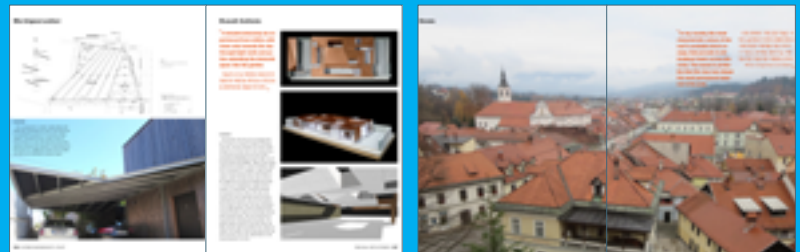

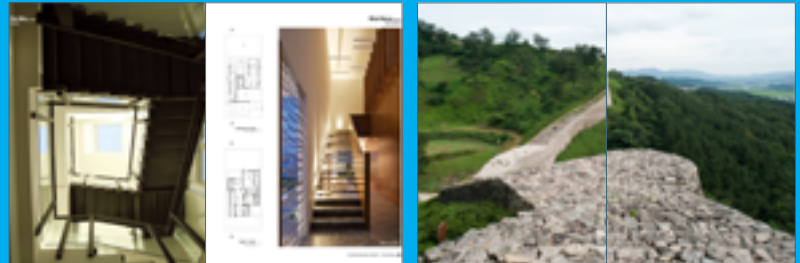

So we would like to show STORY OF ARCHITECTURE ELEMENT through case study from in the entire world and architect's interview.

The first part of the series is set to start with three books, which will continue to grow. The first volume deals with ENTRANCE; the second, STAIRS; and the third with ROOF.

Providing a sweeping survey of contemporary and classical case study, all works and projects are surveyed through photographs, technical drawings, sketch and models.

In interviews, architects around the world are asking themselves what is at the top when designing building elements, what design code is used in each country for a long time, and what design code is used in each country.

This book will help you to think deeply about architectural elements and to think about what is good design for users.
